This is an experiential workshop that focuses on practices which develop body wisdom. Continuum is a non-patterned, pleasurable, and self-paced moving meditation which increases our resonance with the healing matrix of life. Practicing this modality brings one's unique sensibilities to the foreground. These same subtle impulses, the language of the body, are often lost or overpowered by our busy agendas and habitual responses. Any trauma further numbs our ability to feel and enjoy life. Instincts for self-care improve when we can hear our body speak. Continuum modalities of breath, sound, and fluid movement stimulate better energy flow and new flexibility. Participants usually notice that these practices produce better alignment on many levels

In times of stress, our bodies have the ability to maintain and support equilibrium. When stress becomes chronic distress, and/or is perceived as life threatening, the potential for being "traumatized" increases. We live in a world in which global sanity and balance are threatened on a daily basis. World events are part of our collective field, and the constant messages of scarcity, more, danger, and terror infiltrate our tissue with levels of anxiety and speed that contribute to contraction, density and pain.

In this workshop, we will look at the impact of stress, perception of danger, and exposure to traumatic events (i.e current world events) on our bodies. At the same time, we will intimately contact our body's profound wells and pools of resiliency.

A fundamental practice of Continuum Movement is the establishment of a collective, healing field, and this workshop will consciously and creatively draw from our own corporal and energetic wellsprings of knowing, healing, balancing and freedom. Through the medium of breath, sound, and practices which shift habitual perception, we will awaken and acknowledge our bodies as the site of all human experience, from the mundane to the sacred, from the painful to the pleasurable. You will leave this workshop with a capacity to enter into a moving meditation that allows your body to become a sanctuary of stillness and peace as well as a portal to transformation.

We are fluid, flowing event, not a fixed thing.
